

IRELAND WANTS
ABSURD THINGS
MINISTER SAYS

Patterson Lays Bare Leading Issues of the Irish Question in Address.

IS A RELIGIOUS FIGHT

Local Pastor Defends Ku Klux Klan As Working For Americanism.

In a speech, broken at intervals by cheering from the crowd which literally packed the McSwain theatre, main floor and balcony, Sunday afternoon, Dr. N. P. Patterson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, laid bare fundamentals of the Irish issue and warned against the encroachment of subtle influences which he declared to be at work in Ireland, into the American national life.

The crowd which greeted the speaker yesterday was the biggest he ever addressed in Ada except perhaps on his first appearance here, Dr. Patterson declared.

With a boldness which was marked by consideration for his audience, Dr. Patterson reiterated his statement made a week before concerning his investigations in Ireland, asserting that Americans, uninformed on basic principles which underlie the so-called Irish Republic movement, have been all too credulous of its merit.

For almost two hours, Dr. Patterson held his audience in wrapt attention and at the end of his address left the stage practically exhausted. As a climax to his address, the minister made an earnest appeal for a broad-minded consideration of the Ku Klux Klan which he declared he had been convinced after reading its denunciation in the press was a patriotic organization truly fitted to the needs of America at this time.

When Rev. Patterson concluded his speech, Rev. C. C. Morris, pastor of the First Baptist church, stated that it be published verbatim. This motion carried with a unanimous "aye" from the audience. The lecture will be printed complete, in sections, beginning tomorrow.

Ireland Not A Unit.

"I take it you are all here because you are concerned in the topic announced, the so-called Irish issue or the Irish question," he said in opening. "Usually people think you are speaking of Ireland as a whole but not so. In no sense under heaven are the Irish one nation. They are divided into Protestants and Catholics, or Ulster and the Republican party, and even Ulster is further divided into Presbyterians, Anglicans or the Church of England, Congregationalists, Methodists, and so on.

"I usually delight in asking how many in my audience can trace their descent directly to Ireland," the speaker said with a humorous hint, "but today I find it unnecessary as I look into your faces. Only yesterday I went into every office in town trying to find a god map of Ireland--now I have it before me. And one man even asked me what better map of Ireland I wanted than my own face; I thanked him kindly for the compliment."

Dr. Patterson then described the beauty and culture of Ireland and gave statistics on its population which, he said, was about five and a half million, four-fifths of whom are Roman Catholics, one half a million members of the Episcopal church or Church of Ireland, 480,000 Presbyterians, 120,000 Methodists, and other denominations in diminishing proportion.

"When there is a land so divided we can scarcely speak of it as a unit. It was once a province of Great Britain but now more than four-fifths of it population no longer acknowledge the British Jack as their official flag over the land. And with all this fully half a million Anglicans, a half million Presbyterians, and about a half million others recognize no authority, civil or political, but that of the British crown.

American too Cretulous

"Usually we think of Ireland in terms of the Irish Republic. We the Americans, champions and guardians of modern liberty and justice, say perhaps that Ireland deserves her independence and our sympathies go out to them because of the propaganda that has flooded America trying to make us believe that they are striving for freedom as we have striven for it. Ireland has never in all its history an independent nation, it never had a language or literature of its own, it never had its own governing body. It has been the province of some land or some church through all history.

"Two or three centuries ago the Pope said to a certain lawyer 'Go in to Ireland and govern it for yourself with this exception, you shall pay (Continued on Page Six)

Young Dog, Fraternity of Indian
Braves, Appears in Oklahoma For
First Time Last Week is Report

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 3.—The Young Dog Fraternity of the Pawnee Indian tribe appeared in Oklahoma last week, in the home of the Five Civilized Tribes, when fifty young braves, members of the society, came to the state to plea for aid in their petition to the Black-foot tribe for sacred bear claws which they say once belonged to their chief, having been given him by the "Great Bear."

On the first day of October, this tribal fraternity was wending its way back to the hunting grounds and lodges of the Pawnee reservation and their mission, which they attempted to keep secret, is admitted a failure, according to J. M. Dodson, an adopted Cherokee, who today said that his tribe had found the Pawnee's cause lacking proof of ownership.

With their passing again from Oklahoma's borders, the legend of the origination of the Young Dog lodge, and the formation of the first fraternity was recalled by Mr. Dodson, who relates it as it was told to him, he says, by a medicine man of the Pawnees.

"Many moons ago," he narrated, "The Pawnee tribe was in need of food and held a great council at which all the chiefs gathered and meditated on the ways which they might provide. Their game and fish stocks had run low, and their reputation of being a hardy race of fighters was in jeopardy.

"In the council was a young chief who advocated the raising of maize instead of killing of game, as the proper way to restore happiness to the tribe, and to build up the last vigor. The others, however, only laughed at him, and called him a 'skaw-chief,' eat maize to be like water. As they ridiculed him, he became very sorrowful, and he was finally told that on his forehead lay the task of providing a plan by which the Pawnees might regain their lost power."

All that night, according to the legend, the young chief wandered through the forest, fighting hordes of evil thoughts from his mind, when suddenly he came upon the banks of a wide smooth lake on which thousands of fowl were floating. To the every hand, he perceived every animal of the hunt, friendly and unfriendly, and in his secret heart he called them by friendly names, such as "little fur-bird" and "my feathered friend."

"Why should I kill my friends, though I am starving?" he asked himself, and so saying, he wandered all that night and the next until at last, exhausted, he sank into a deep sleep beside the waters.

Is Carried Away.

As he slept, he perceived he had been carried away and was in the midst of a large lodge assembly, the legend continues. The chief, however, was no Indian, but a young and strong dog, very wise and very fearless. All the fowl of the forest were gathered there, and all the beasts of the woods also were present.

The young dog rose and with gravity addressed the conclave. "To this young chief, our protector and savior, in recognition of his kind thoughts, I will give the cunning of trail, the swiftness of my foot and my keenness of smell, all endowed me by the Great Spirit, because I stood in high favor with him. I make my gift that the chief may prosper and may also find favor." Here the legend broke off into a description of costumes used by different tribe members.

After much silence and meditation the eagle spoke, "I will give to our brother, two feathers from my tail," he said, "that he will be swift and unerring in his warfare," and so saying he thrust the feathers in the hair of the young chief, according to Mr. Dodson's version of the story.

The crane gave a piece of his wing bone, to be made into a war whistle to hang about the neck of the young chief, the buffalo gave him a strip of his hide, and the ram gave him one of his horns. The fox, cunning in such things, showed the warrior how to fashion the horn into a spear head, and the duck loaned him feathers to affix to the end, to guide the spear's flight.

The bear, last to contribute, presented one of his claws. "This will multiply," he said, "and when you have enough wear them in many wars, always. It is a sign of my favor."

Taught Sacred Dance.

Then he was taught a most sacred dance, which has been carried down, so the medicine man says, to the present Young Dog dance.

The young chief, when he awakened, found that his dream was real, and that he was clothed with the gifts of his forest brothers. Hastening to the lodge of his forefathers, he assembled the tribesmen, teaching them the dance, telling his experience, and instructing the others in his new found lore. And that very night's moon shown on a strange dance, after which the Blackfeet were attacked, defeated, and provision obtained. One chief forgot in the height of battle the admonitions of the furred folk, however, and shot a young bear for sport, so that the sacred claws were mysteriously taken from the young chieftain and fell into the hands of the Blackfoot tribe. Only the appearance of a young dog, whom they knew must be the Great Dog, saved the tribe from annihilation.

So it is that the Blackfeet have the sacred bear claws of the Pawnees, and that "The Pawnees prize their dogs above all else," concluded Mr. Dodson. The dance still lives, however, and when it is used the Pawnees are successful in war, their medicine men say.

GRAND JURY DUE TO PROBE FIGHT
WITH KLANSMEN

But Men Stabbed Must Be Given Chance to Recover Judge Declares

SHERIFF CENSURED

Bystanders Are Injured In Fight That Follow Interrupted Parade

(By the Associated Press)

WACO, Texas, Oct. 3.—Until noon today no action had been taken towards setting a date for the calling together of the 54th district county grand jury to investigate the clash Saturday night at Lorena, a small village 14 miles south of here, between parading Ku Klux Klansmen and Sheriff Bob Buchanan and two deputies in which three men were seriously wounded, one of them perhaps fatally and several other injured.

(By the Associated Press)

WACO, Texas, Oct. 3.—The announcement of the date when the 54th district grand jury will be called to reconvene for investigation of the fight at Lorena, 14 miles south of here, Saturday night, following an attempt by Sheriff Bob Buchanan of McLennan county to halt a Ku Klux Klan parade which resulted in portable fatal wounds to three men and serious injury to seven other, was expected today here.

Yesterday Judge R. I. Munroe of the 54th district court announced that the grand jury would be called to inquire into the affair but that the date for its meeting would not be set until the condition of those more seriously injured could be ascertained. Later, however, following a conference with the county attorney, F. B. Tiley, after the latter had refused the demands of a committee of approximately 100 Lorena citizens that he file complaints against Sheriff Buchanan and his deputy, M. Burton, for their participation in the encounter, he announced that the grand jury would be called without delay. He continued his stand, though, that the investigation should not be ordered until the wounded had sufficiently recovered to enable them to testify.

All Recovering

Late last night those under treatment at a local hospital were reported as "resting well" where Sheriff Buchanan, Louis Crow, proprietor of a local laundry, and Ed Howard, were still in a critical condition. The latter two, who were reported to have been innocent bystanders, were stabbed by an unidentified assailant. The sheriff was shot twice, one of them a pistol bullet which penetrated his right lung.

Appearing before the county attorney yesterday, the delegation of Lorena citizens declared they believed a serious offense had been committed and that they were anxious for justice to be done. In a resolution signed by more than three hundred citizens of the village and published in a local newspaper today, they set forth seven "statements" in order that "the world may know the facts in the tragedy which was enacted in our little town last night, and which we deplore."

Sheriff Is Blamed

The resolution exonerated the Ku Klux Klan, saying that they did not believe the Klan had violated any law, or had any intention of doing so by staging their parade and asserted: "We irrevocably place the blame for the shedding of blood on the sheriff."

In supporting the charge, one resolution says: "We induced the leaders of the parade to accede to the demands of the sheriff that two of the paraders should be unmasked." Sheriff Buchanan contradicted this statement at a hospital Saturday night when he declared he attempted to prevent the parade only after the Klan leaders had refused to grant his request that some of the Klansmen be unmasked in order to establish their identity.

Spectators among the crowd of more than three thousand who had gathered from surrounding towns and villages to witness the parade, told of seeing the sheriff step up to the leader of the advancing white clad marchers and attempt to snatch the mask from his face. A free for all fight ensued in which several shots were fired and knife thrusts were made.

The wounded, eight of whom were stabbed, were brought here in ambulances and private motor cars.

Rivalry of States in Big Ten
Stimulates Interest In Teams
Of Biggest Football Circles

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—While the center of interest in the "Big Ten" football race centers in the games for the championship, many games are played with non-conference teams which have traditions of years around them and which attract as much attention as all but the championship contests. In some cases, this is because of rivalry in the state, in some because of early associations and in some because of intersectional rivalry.

This year teams of the middle west will travel to the east for four games of note. The games in which "Big Ten" teams are combatants is the meeting between Indiana and Harvard, October 8 and the clash between Chicago and Princeton, October 22. The third game is the annual battle between Notre Dame and West Point. The other is the second meeting between Nebraska and Penn State.

For the first time in many years a game is not scheduled between a team of the "Big Ten" and of the Missouri Valley Conference. Three or four usually are played and while the older conference has a vast majority of games won, the games usually were hard fought. Several attempts were made to arrange games, but each one of the teams approached found it impossible to arrange its schedule to meet the open date of the proposed opponent. One of the reasons is the growth of interest in the conference race itself so the teams of each organization feel its hard games should be for the honors.

within its own organization and not against a non-conference opponent.

Notre Dame Strong

With Missouri Valley teams not available, the non-conference teams outside of the immediate states of the Western Conference come from the Dakotas and one from Colorado. With the exception of Harvard and Princeton, Notre Dame playing the largest number of conference games in many years, is expected to be the most serious contender met in the non-championship schedules.

Harvard and Indiana have the center of the stage Saturday, October 8, while two South Dakota teams invade the Big Ten; Notre Dame plays at Iowa; Michigan meets Case and Ohio meets Ohio Wesleyan.

Michigan and the Michigan Aggies and Purdue and Notre Dame present a pair of games worth considering for October 15. Chicago and Princeton will center the thoughts of the east and west on October 22 while Notre Dame, from its place in Big Ten territory meets Nebraska in a game which attracts much attention from the followers of both teams.

The last Saturday of October has a meeting between Notre Dame and Indiana as its piece de resistance while the final meeting between a team of the conference and a non-conference team follows on November 5, when the Walker-Merriam coached Depauw squad does battle with Illinois.

CASHIER SAYS TWO ARE BANK BANDITS

Braserton Identifies Pair As "Unmasked Men" of Fitzhugh Case.

Claude Castleberry, of near Asher, and Arthur Gotcher of this city, arrested late Friday afternoon in connection with the robbery at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon of the Farmers State Bank at Fitzhugh, were positively identified by J. R. Braserton, cashier, late Saturday as the "unmasked men" who forced him and three customers into the vault and made off with $1800 in loot.

When Mr. Braserton arrived in Ada Saturday the two men were brought from the county jail into the office of County Attorney Wayne Wadlington. The Fitzhugh cashier, according to Sheriff Bob Duncan, said he could not be mistaken in the men.

The hold-up last Friday of the Fitzhugh bank, although only the second such instance that has ever happened in Pontotoc county, the first being the robbery of a bank at Francis several years ago, has been characterized by officers as being one of the boldest strokes on county criminal records. The two men have made practically no statement in connection with the hold-up in which they are alleged to have been connected.

Gotcher and Castleberry have not been arraigned and probably will not be for a few days because of the fact that district court went into session this morning and is taking practically all of his time the county attorney said.

Ed Stewart, whose alleged connection with the robbery has not been discussed publicly by county officers, will be arraigned with the other two men, it was intimated.

An early rumor that there were women with the men who robbed the bank is still discounted by officers.

Notice Masons.

Ada Lodge, No. 119, will meet this evening at 7:30 for work in the Fellowcraft Degree.—John Thrasher, W. M.

DISTRICT COURT
OPENS FOR GRIND

Arraignment and Pleas Are First Details Dispensed With Monday

District court went into session this morning at 9 o'clock on its annual October criminal docket.

Before District Judge J. W. Bolen opened the court for its two weeks' sitting, the room was filled with spectators, witnesses and principals in cases, the last class waiting expectantly for their arraignment.

Practically all of the morning session was taken up with calls for arraignment, pleas, and the filing of notices of denunciations. In the majority of cases, attorneys waived arraignment and asked for 24 hours to complete their pleas. With this preliminary work out of the way, everything is expected to be in readiness by tomorrow morning for the seating of a jury and the opening of cases.

In the arraignment process this morning several cases of long standing were thrown out of court by Judge Bolen upon the recommendation of County Attorney Wayne Wadlington, because of the fact that the prosecuting witness had disappeared from the county. Several domestic relation charges were dismissed because the complaining witness "did not care to have cases further aired."

The district court docket set for today was to be:

State of Oklahoma vs. Dock Moses, False Pretense.

State of Oklahoma vs. Tom Fournoy, J. H. Strong and Anne Brages, Grand Larceny.

State of Oklahoma vs. Henry Franklin, Forgery in Second Degree.

State of Oklahoma vs. Clarence Clark and Ira Fish, Grand Larceny.

State of Oklahoma vs. Onie Knight, Cruelty To Animals.

Tomorrow the case of the state Lloyd Bennett, 16 year old boy, charged with the murder of "Mexican Bill" in Glenwood park recently, promises to hold the center of attention. It is probable, however, that preliminary arrangements and other cases will throw the opening of this trial later into the week.

Shortly after 10:30 this morning Judge Bolen swept aside all details and opened challenging on the jury for the first case. This required but a few minutes and the case of the state vs. Fred Salmon, charged with assault with intent to rape his 16 year old daughter, was called.

Assistant County Attorney H. F. Mathis, who conducted the Salmon preliminary, outlined the state's case to the jury. Soon after he had finished the first witness for the state was called to the stand.

PURCELL WAXES
BALL BUT CAN'T FOOL ADA NINE

Local Team Subjected To Long Game For Victory of 4-3 Sunday.

ADA CINCHEs TITLE

Waner Whiffs Ten Men As Wilcoxin Retires Same Number of Locals.

Ada won, 3 to 4, but it wasn't much of a ball game.

The long, lank left hander from Purcell was about the slowest institution seen in Ada in many a day. To add to the slowness, he had a patch of paraffin on his left leg of his trousers, and he kept rubbing the ball over the patch eternally, even though it is contrary to the rules to put any foreign substance on the ball. Protests were made against this use of the paraffin, but he was permitted to go on through the game, delaying it and getting on the nerves of both players and spectators. After two hours of agony, the home club had won in spite of the obstacle.

This game gives, without question, the amateur championship to Ada. While more games are to be played with Konawa, it is said most of the players will be professionals who are simply playing a few post-season games. Konawa has not played consistent amateur ball this summer, and even if they were to win the series at the end of the week, they could hardly set up a claim for amateur honors.

Waner Is Crafty.

Lefty Waner had plenty on the ball yesterday to baffle the Purcell batsmen. He struck out 10 men, while Wilcoxin was getting the same number of the home bunch. The visitors were able to connect for only 5 hits off Waner, while his team mates were hammering out 7 against the paraffin hurler.

Ada made two runs in the first inning. Young singled and Ralph Waner repeated. Lee, Purcell's catcher, let a bad ball get away from him, and both runners advanced a base. A wild heave by Wilcoxin barely hit the grandstand, and Young trotted home. Paul Waner was given a free pass to first when Wilcoxin was unable to locate the rubber plate. Medler did like wise, filling the bases. Rutledge was out. McLaughlin to L. Matthews. R. Waner scoring on the play. Cover struck out. P. Waner was caught off the third base and run down between the third and the plate.

The visitors evened the score in the third. Seitz singled, and stole second. L. Matthews walked. McLaughlin flew out to Young. Bartlett fanned, and the others advanced a base. E. Matthews singled, scoring Seitz and E. Matthews. English lined out to P. Waner.

Ada took the lead again in the fourth. Rutledge was safe on an error by L. Matthews. Cover beat out an infield hit. Sparks doubled, scoring Rutledge. Wray grounded to McLaughlin, who threw to the plate, catching Cover. Wray was safe, and stole second. Sparks was run down between third and the plate. Fain fanned.

Tied in Fifth.

The score was tied again in the fifth. Seitz singled, the third time to hit out of three times up. L. Matthews sacrificed him to second and was out by Rutledge unassisted. McLaughlin was safe on Fain's error. Fain's throw to third was wild, and Seitz scored. Bartlett fanned. E. Matthews grounded to Young, who touched out McLaughlin.

Ada's winning run was scored in the sixth. Medler was given a free pass to first. Rutledge drove out a three bagger, scoring Medler. Cover was out. Wilcoxin to L. Matthews.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY
A MORNING PRAYER.—Create in men a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.—Psalm 51:10.

ORIGIN OF NEW PARTY.

Senator Luther Harrison, admittedly one of the best informed men in Oklahoma on political matters, comments thus on the new party recently launched at Shawnee.

"Another third party has been born in Oklahoma, of uncertain parentage and under suspicious circumstances. Its titular leaders are J. B. Tosh and George A. Wilson, both highly dissatisfied with Democratic environment—Tosh because he was beaten for congress in a Democratic primary and Wilson because he failed to carry his own county for state superintendent in a Democratic primary. They are therefore frantically beating their little tom-toms beseeching the disaffected to renounce all old parties and join this new-born product of political cupiscence. It only costs $3.50 to join, which initiation fee goes to compensate the founders of the order for their patriotism in volunteering to save the country."

LOOKS SUSPICIOUS.

Here's hoping the K. K. K. push a package of coin under our front door for the benefit of the worthy poor. We know right now which of the worthy poor will receive a new pair of trousers in case this happens.—Allen Democrat.

This sounds rather suspicious. We are inclined to take part of the statement with a grain of salt, because the last time we saw the editor of the Democrat he was wearing a good pair of trousers and did not look like he needed another just then. However, it is possible he is looking ahead and preparing for the future by putting in a bid in advance of real needs.

MORE MONEY.

A few days ago we talked with a man who represents a farm loan company. He was on a trip on which he was expected to place $325,000. The fact that there is now plenty of money to lend on good real estate security is one of the surest signs that business is improving. For a time the loan companies were out of business. Now they are looking for good business and seem to have plenty of money to put on good land.

And this reminds us of the comments this farm loan agent made in reference to conditions and practices here. "The farmers here about ought to give more time to raising food crops and dairying, and less to growing cotton," he commented. "With your climate and soil, you ought to have enough food crops to support canning factories and other factories used in putting up foods for the cities."

Inasmuch as the amount of money this agent will agree to loan on a farm depends to a certain extent upon what the farmer grows and his probable paying power, the words have much more weight than if uttered by just an ordinary individual. It is his duty to determine what a man can do with the capital invested.

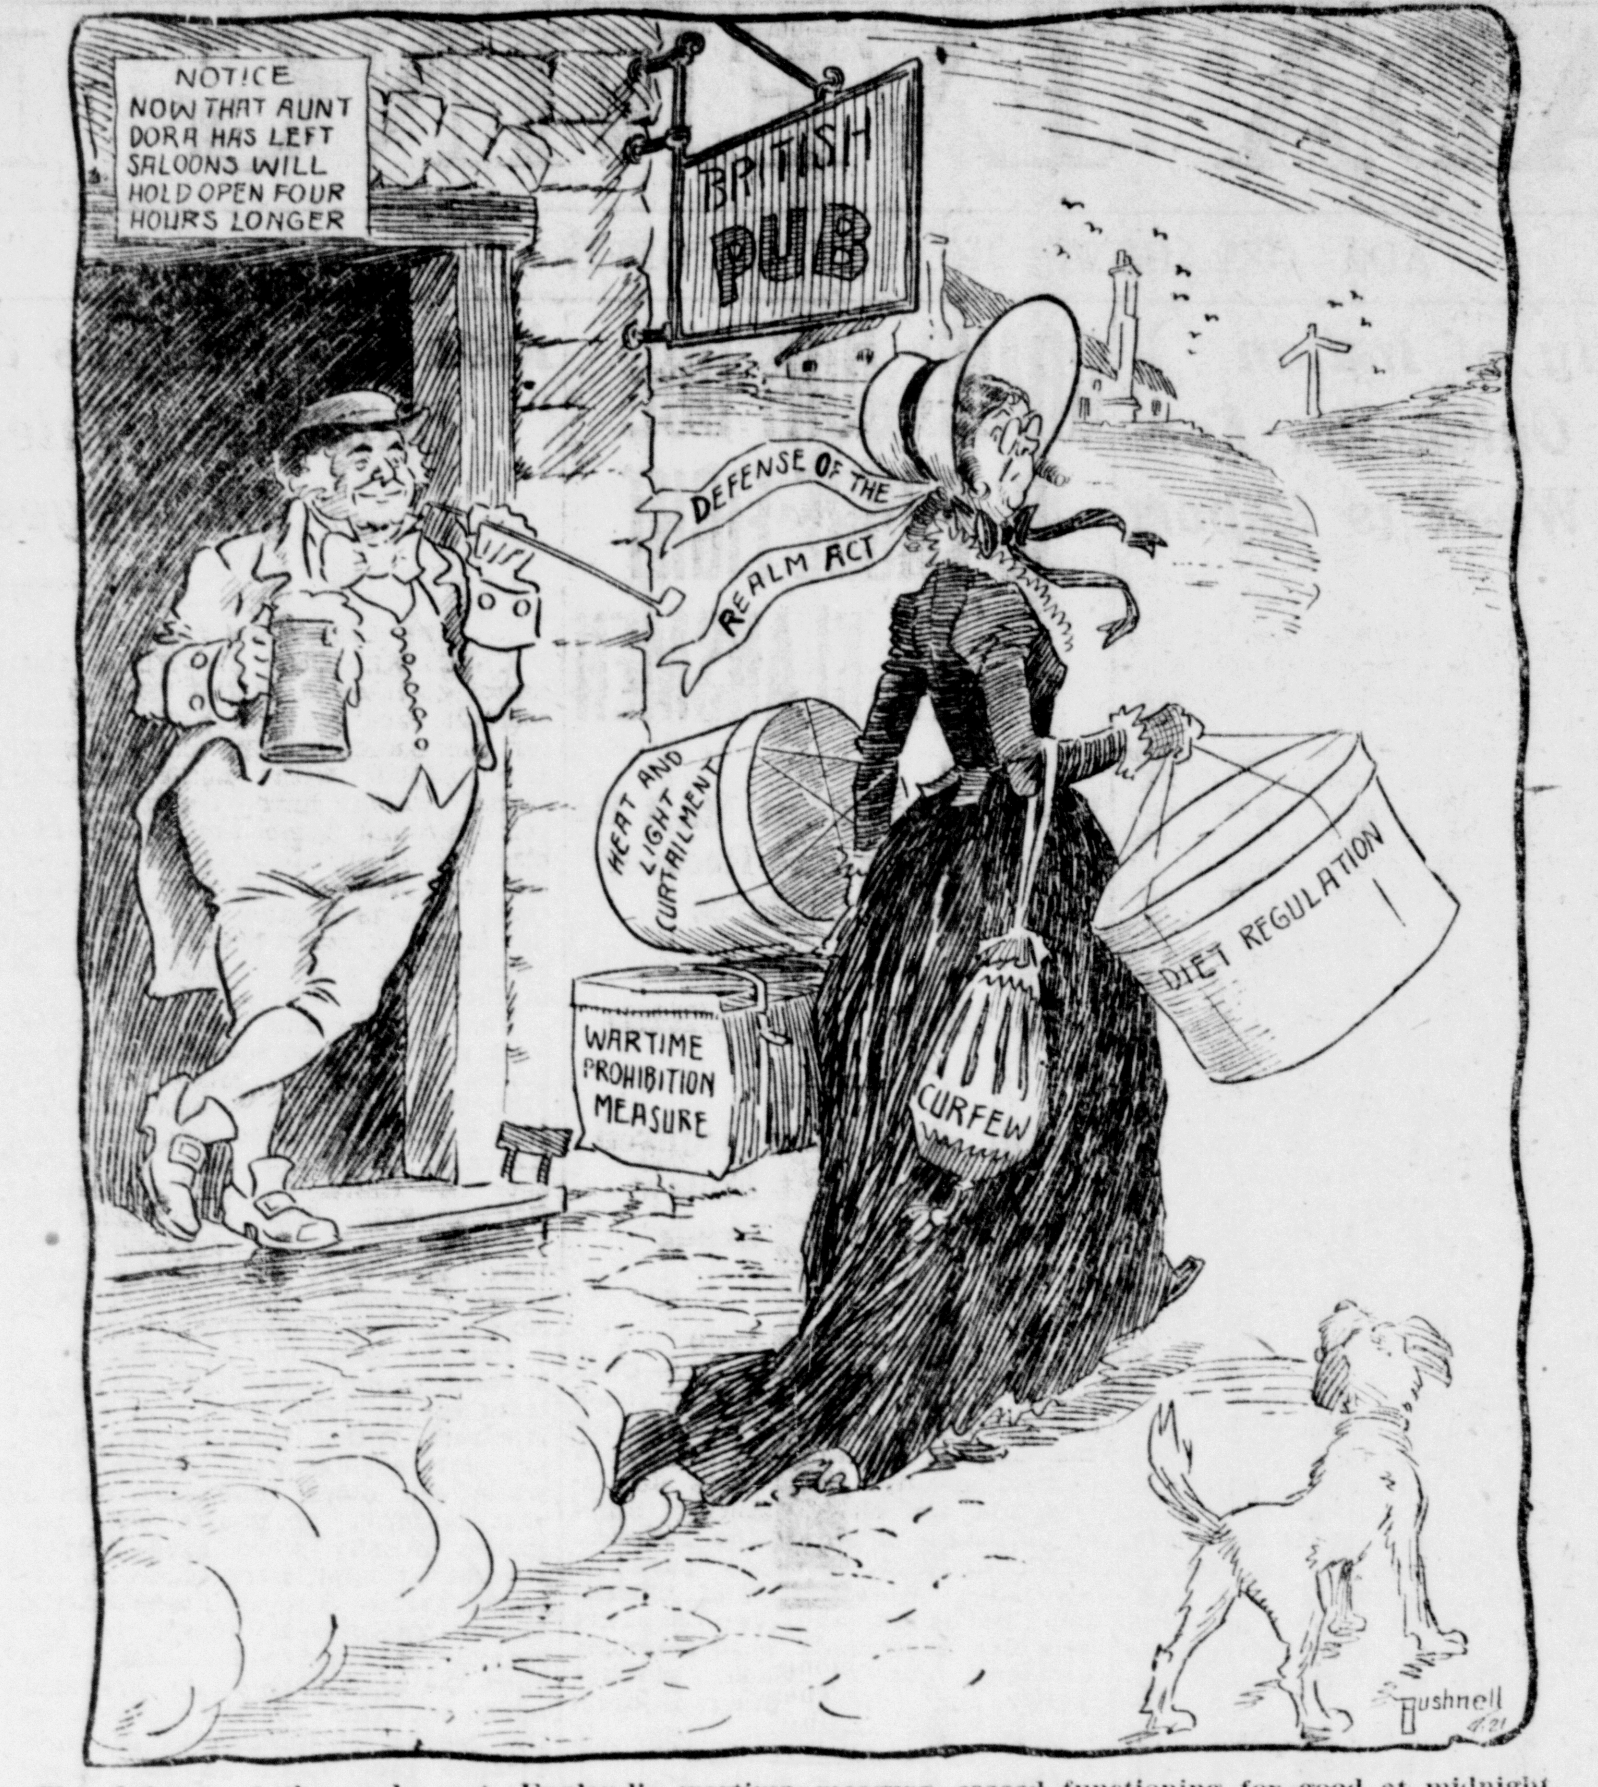

We occasionally find people who do not appreciate their home town or country as they should. If they happen to live in Ada, they think it is too much of a country town to supply their exacting taste or that society in Ada is not of as good quality as Oklahoma City, so they go there for what they seek. In Oklahoma City it is St. Louis or New York that they look to. In New York it is Europe that holds everything worth while. America is too crude a country to suit their super-sensitive nature. So it goes all up and down the line. It's home loyalty that counts.

New Mexico and the sixth congressional district of Massachusetts both went republican in recent elections. But in the Massachusetts district republican margin was greatly cut. The votes show that the republicans have lost a great deal of the confidence they had a year ago, or rather it shows that the democrats are not so unpopular as they were a year ago. Another six months of a republican congress ought to be enough to turn the thing over completely.

We have always maintained that Pontotoc county is right up to the minute in everything, but we were about to get behind in the matter of bank robberies until the affair at Ftzhugh Friday. There had been but one since the county was organized, and that was several years ago, while they were being pulled off everywhere else, but now who can say that Pontotoc is behind the rest of the United States?

A cool breeze is all right.

TO AVOID FAILURE.

Wichita Daily Times: You are extremely interested in those who have made a success of life, for they have attained what you want. You study them, try to figure out how they did it, hoping to get a profitable idea for yourself. A good system for getting ahead.

But a psychologist, in analyzing strength, doesn't stop with a study of Sandow. He takes the other extreme also, and studies the defects that keep the weak from becoming strong.

In your way, you are a psychologist, though you may call a psychological study "getting his number."

So, then, in studying success, do not overlook the failures.

Learn what made them fail and you know what to avoid.

There is nothing mysterious about the degree of prosperity and success of any business, whether it's the standard Oil company or the owner of a peanut stand in Wichita Falls.

A business fails or succeeds by the same processes and for the same reasons that an individual goes up or down.

After all you are a business organization, with a production department (your work) a purchasing department (your spending) and a sales organization (your ability to sell your services for a high or low price.)

Analyze the reasons why some businesses go into receivers' hands and you have an analysis for personal failure.

There are about 18,000,000 business concerns in our country. In the last decade, failures have averaged 14,152 a year, or less than one in 100.

Broadstreet's credit agency analyzes those failure and finds that in every 1,000 failures, lack of success is due as follows:

Personal Causes:
Lack of capital	3p3
Lack of capital	323
Fraud	70
Inexperience	66
Neglect	13
Unwise credits	16
Extravagance	12
Speculation	6

Outside Causes:

Business conditions	144
Failure of others	12
Competition	13

Incompetence heads the list. That shows the value of schooling and experience laboriously and slowly acquired.

Lack of capital comes second as a reason for failure. In most cases that can be overcome only by patient saving.

Business conditions, third in rank as a failure cause, are beyond the control of any individual. The best we can do is save a reserve fund for the lean years.

SOWING FALL WHEAT WELL UNDER WAY NOW

(By the Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 3.—Harvest and the sowing of fall grains is in full swing with the weather for the past week most favorable for all farm products, according to the weekly crop report issued here today at the offices of John A. Whitehurst, president of the state board of agriculture.

"Probably three-fourths of the wheat acreage has been sown, and the remainder is being drilled rapidly," the report states. "In places pastures are growing night and day to make up for the time lost when the ground was too dry. Generally, the land is in excellent shape for seeding. An increased acreage of winter barley is being sown while that of rye practically is as usual."

"In a few instances late corn is reaching maturity, but most of it still lacks several weeks to ripen. The price of broom corn is advancing, slightly, in the face of a steady demand, and marketing is active. The best corn is bringing $95 to $105 a ton."

"There has been little change in the cotton situation during the week. Probably forty percent of the entire crop already has been ginned, which is much more than is usually the case this early in the season, the average at this time being 13 percent. The boll weevil, boll worm and army worm continue ravaging what remains and picking practically will be over in another month."

"Harvesting of kafir and milo is active with yields comparing very well with the average. There is some complaint of chinch bug damage. Much sirup is being made some yields running more than 200 gallons per acre. The price ranges from 50 to 75 cents per gallon."

"Sweet potatoes generally are cool and large quantities are to be stored in houses well equipped to keep them through the winter. The peanut yield is good and prospects seem favorable for an increased acreage next year, especially on those farms which produce more hogs. The alfalfa seed made from the fourth crop has not filled well."

"Pastures, while weedy in many instances, are good and livestock is in a satisfactory condition."

CIRCUS FOLK ENJOY FEATS WITH BEASTS

Al G. Barnes big four-ring wild animal circus, the biggest show of its kind in the world is scheduled to arrive in Ada tonight. Fifty-two car loads of wild animal life in the jungles are with the circus. Their trainers are girls for the most part—girls who have never known any other life than that of the circus. Their fathers and mothers before them were circus folk.

Feature acts take these girls into cages with the wild beasts where they perform with lions, tigers, leopards and panthers as though the great brutes were kittens. It is a dangerous life, but fascinating for these girls and the public as well. Here are some of the things these girls do for the amusement of the crowds:

Mabel Stark wrestles, unarmed, with a great full grown royal Bengal tiger. She wears a suit of leather to prevent his sharp claws reaching her flesh even in play.

Martha Florine works a group of lions, tigers, leopards, and panthers, the first time these natural enemies of the jungles have ever been brought into the same arena and made to perform together.

Captain Riccardio toys with death in a great cage filled with lions and places his head between their jaws.

Grace Marvel compels panthers to fox trot to the strains of a 40-piece Marine band.

Polar and grizzly bears wrestle and box in the steel cages with their trainers.

A herd of elephants enacts a scene from the battlefields of Europe firing cannons, falling "dead" and carrying their "slain" from the fields on stretchers.

Al G. Barnes, head of the great circus which bears his name, started in the show business some 35 years ago with a few dogs and ponies, today he is the head of the largest circus of its kind in the world. It carries 52 cars in its train, 1200 wild and domestic animals, 550 horses and 600 people.

Barnes broke and trained many of the wild animals in his circus, from dogs and monkeys he soon made the acquaintance of lions and tigers with leopards and panthers. Those he taught to perform all sorts of tricks in the circus until he now ranks as the greatest wild animal trainer the circus world has ever produced. A two mile long street parade will be staged at 10:30 tomorrow morning.

Two Persons Killed When Fire Destroys Old Historic Hotel

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Two persons are known to have lost their lives in a fire which yesterday partially destroyed the National hotel on Pennsylvania avenue, a few blocks from the capitol. The dead are: George Mason, 40, of Charlottesville, Virginia, an employee of the shipping board, and Miss Catherine Dean, 25, a telephone operator at the hotel.

The hotel was one of the oldest in the city. Henry Clay died there and Abraham Lincoln often dined there.

KONAWA TAKES EASY GAME FROM ASHER NINE

KONAWA, Oct. 3.—(Special)—The Konawa baseball club yesterday won its second victory from Asher by defeating them in a one-sided batting test, 20 to 5. At no time were the visitors a match for the locals and Konawa had the game won after the first inning. The game was put on ice in the fifth when Konawa knocked the Asher moundman from the box for 14 runs. Several home-runs were chalked up in this inning.

These two clubs have played three games this season, Konawa losing one on the Asher field by a small margin. Konawa is bringing its club to Ada next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday for a series of three games. Two players from the Little Rock, Ark., Southern League team, will participate in the game, playing for Konawa.

850 DISASTER DEATH TOLL FOR ONE YEAR

Red Cross Gives $1,871,000 Relief When 65,000 Families Are Made Homeless.

Forty-three disasters, resulting in the death in the United States of 850 persons and the injury of 2,500 called for emergency relief measures and the expenditure of $1,871,000 by the American Red Cross during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, says an announcement based upon the forthcoming annual report of the Red Cross. These disasters caused property damage estimated at $30,000,000, affected sixty-seven communities and rendered 65,000 families homeless.

The year's disasters were of varying types, including several which previously had never been thought of as falling within that classification. The Red Cross furnished relief in seventeen fires of magnitude, five floods, seven tornadoes or cyclones, one devastating storm, three explosions, including the one in Wall street; one building accident, two typhoid epidemics, the most serious being that at Salem, Ohio, which affected 9 per cent of the population; one smallpox epidemic, in the republic of Haiti; one train wreck, the race riot at Tulsa, Okla.; the famine in China, emergency relief in famine among the Indians of Alaska, the grasshopper plague in North Dakota and an earthquake in Italy.

Pueblo Most Serious

By far the most severe of the disasters in the United States during the period covered by the Red Cross report was the Pueblo flood early in June, 1921. The rehabilitation problem confronting the Red Cross in Pueblo was one of the most difficult in recent years. When the first news of the horror was flashed throughout the country, the American Red Cross National Headquarters responded with a grant of $105,000 for relief work. Governor Shoup of Colorado, appreciating the long and successful experience of the Red Cross in organizing disaster relief work, placed the entire responsibility for the administration of relief in its hands.

In response to appeals from President Harding, Governor Shoup and other governors of western states and through local chapters of the Red Cross and other community organizations, public-spirited citizens brought the total contributed for Pueblo's rehabilitation to more than $325,000. The terrible havoc wrought by the flood waters is a matter of record. More than 2,300 homes were affected and 7,351 persons were left homeless. Estimates of $500,000 as an absolute minimum for rehabilitation were made by Red Cross officials in charge of the relief work.

Fast Work in Wall Street

The Wall street explosion was notable in that relief workers of the Red Cross were on the scene twenty minutes after the disaster occurred. The race riot at Tulsa also was unique in disaster relief annals in that outside of a small emergency relief fund contributed by the Red Cross, the only relief measures outside the city consisted of the service of social workers, nurses and a trained executive whose object was to assist local forces in directing their own efforts.

In decided contrast with the previous year, only one tornado assumed the proportions of a major disaster. This occurred on April 15, in the border sections of Texas and Arkansas with the city of Texarkana as the center. The significant feature of this disaster relief work was the fact that it covered so much rural territory as to make necessary a large number of relief workers.

The famine in China, necessitating relief expenditures totalling more than $1,000,000 by the American Red Cross was by far the most serious of the foreign disasters in which the Red Cross gave aid.

Builds Up Its Machinery

In connection with the administration of disaster relief measures, an increasing effectiveness on the part of the Red Cross to deal with emergencies was manifested during the past year. In 328 chapters of the American Red Cross there have been formed special committees to survey the resources of their respective communities and to be prepared in case of disaster. In others of the 3,402 active chapters, a network of communication has been formed through which instantaneous relief may be dispatched to any part of the United States.

That its work in this field may be continued with ever greater effectiveness, the American Red Cross is appealing for widespread renewal of membership during its Annual Roll Call, to be conducted this year from November 11 to 24.

ADA BATTERED IN GAME WITH TULSA ELEVEN

Playing against overwhelming odds, with little experience, a light line, new men, and bucking an extra heavy squad, East Central Normal football squad took defeat at Tulsa Saturday afternoon in its opening game with the Tulsa University by a score of 22 to 0. No man was permanently put out of the game, but several Ada men and one Tulsa player were injured. The local men had no chance. With a line averaging more than 216 pounds, a back field of more than 186 and many experienced football men, Tulsa entered the game and began a slaughter of the visitors. Only one of two men in Ada's line-up weighed the average of the Tulsa line men.

Opening up with a touchdown in the first five minutes, Tulsa continued to pound the Ada line and in a short time succeeded in beating resistance to a low cbb. The third period was the easiest of the game. Tulsa used her second string men.

Coach Thompson was proud of his men, however, and stated that he realized they did not have the weight, experience and speed needed to meet so strong a team this season. He was bound by contract to play the game which for some reason was placed on top of Ada's season schedule. His men will meet the Wilburton school of mines here this week.

With more than a dozen cars and drivers, and from two to three Boy Scouts to the car, the drive for discarded clothes for the needy of Ada and community was launched at four o'clock Sunday afternoon and met with considerable success, according to reports from the local charities secretary today.

While in some sections of the city very little success was met with, other sections came to the front and extra amounts of clothing, school books and other discarded supplies that could be of use to the poor were given. The Red Cross and local charities organization wish to extend their thanks to the people of the city for assisting them in this manner and in assisting in relieving suffering among the poor.

Work of assorting the clothes, books and other articles will be started this week and given out to those who need them as rapidly as those in charge see fit, it was announced.

Stories of Great Scouts

By Elmo Scott Watson

UNCLE DICK WOOTTON, "KEEPER OF THE GATE IN MOUNTAINS"

Richens Lacy Wootton his parents in Virginia named him at his birth in 1816; young Dick Wootton his companions in Ceran St. Vrain's trading outfit called him in 1836 when he joined them on the Santa Fe trail as a teamster, but as Uncle Dick Wootton, the "keeper of the gate in the mountains," he was best known to every trapper, fur trader and Indian fighter in the West.

Wootton's inexperience made him the butt of many a joke among St. Vrain's veterans, and one incident did not add greatly to his reputation among them. One night when the train had been corralled as usual in a circle, young Wootton was posted as a guard, with orders to fire at any moving object outside the corral. After some hours he saw a form moving about nearby, and promptly opened fire. Traders, awakened by his shot, rushed out to find that young Dick had killed one of their mules which he wandered out of the corral. Dick soon lived down his blunder, however, by his courage in a fight with a band of Comanches a few days later. Here Wootton killed his first Indian.

Wootton became a trapper and trader, and had many a hard battle with the Indians in his wanderings. He won the undying friendship of the Arapahoes, however, by saving the life of an Arapaho woman who was lost in a blizzard. They called him "Cut Hand," because he had lost two fingers from one hand in a boyhood accident.

During the Mexican war Wootton served as a scout for Col. William Doniphan, and once was asked to carry dispatches back to Santa Fe through a country swarming with hostile Indians and enemy troops. He was offered an escort but refused it, saying he could make it better alone. He accomplished the perilous task, and received the highest praise from Doniphan for his feat.

In his later years Uncle Dick Wootton, as he now was called, settled in Raton pass, on the border line of Colorado and New Mexico.

When the Santa Fe railroad built its line through Raton pass, one of the biggest locomotives was named "Uncle Dick" in honor of Wootton, and the old scout always watched for its appearance and smiled proudly as it thundered to the top of the pass with its heavy load.

porch; and even at a distance they still contrived to make themselves intolerable; looking back over their shoulders, at intervals, with say-not-so expressions on their faces. Even when these faces were far enough away to be but yellowish oval planes, their say-not-so expressions were still biting-ly eloquent.

Now a northern breeze chilled the air, as the hateful three became indistinguishable in the haze of autumn dusk. Florence stopped swinging her foot, left the railing, and went morosely into the house. And here it was her fortune to make two discoveries vital to her present career; the first arising out of a conversation between her father and mother in the library, where a gossiping fire of soft coal encouraged this proper Sunday afternoon entertainment for man and wife.

"Sit down and rest awhile," said her mother. "I'm afraid you play too hard when Patty and the boys are here. Do sit down quietly and rest yourself a little while." And as Florence obeyed, Mrs. Atwater turned to her husband, resuming, "Well, that's what I said. I told Aunt Carrie I thought the same way about it that you did. Of course, nobody ever knows what Julia's going to do next, and nobody needs to be surprised at anything she does do. Ever since she came home from school about four-fifths of all the young men in town have been wild about her—and so's every old bachelor, for the matter of that!"

"Yes," Mr. Atwater added. "Every old widower, too."

His wife warmly accepted the amendment. "And every old widower, too," she said, nodding. "Rather! And of course Julia's done exactly as she pleased about everything, and naturally she's going to do as she pleases about this."

"Well, of course, it is her own affair, Mollie," Mr. Atwater said, mildly. "She couldn't be expected to consult the whole Atwater family connection before—"

"Oh, no," she agreed, "I don't say she could. Still, it is rather upsetting, coming so suddenly like this, when not one of the family have ever seen him—never even heard his very name before—"

"Well, that part of it isn't especially strange, Mollie—when he was born and brought up in a town three hundred miles from here. I don't see just how we could have heard his name—unless he visited here, or got into the papers in some way."

Mrs. Atwater seemed unwilling to yield a mysterious point. She rocked decorously in her chair, shook her head, and after setting her lips rigidly, opened them to insist that she could never change her mind: Julia had acted very abruptly. "Why couldn't she have let her poor father know, at least a few days before she did?"

Mr. Atwater sighed. "Why, she explains in her letter that she only knew it, herself, an hour before she wrote."

"Her poor father!" his wife repeated commiseratingly. "Why, Mollie, I don't see that father's especially to be pitied." "Don't you?" said Mrs. Atwater. "That old man, to have to live in that big house all alone, except a few negro servants?"

"Why, no! About half the houses in the neighborhood, up and down the street, are fully occupied by close relatives of his; I doubt if he'll be really as lonely as he'd like to be. And he's often said he'd give a great deal if Julia had been a plain, unpopular girl. I'm strongly of the opinion, myself, that he'll be pleased about this. Of course it may upset him a little, just at first."

"Yes, I think it will!" Mrs. Atwater shook her head forebodingly. "And he isn't the only one it's going to upset."

"No, he isn't," her husband admitted, seriously. "That's always been the trouble with Julia; she never could bear to seem disappointing; and so, of course, I suppose every one of 'em had a special idea that he was really about the top of the list with her."

"Every last one of 'em was positive of it," said Mrs. Atwater. "That was Julia's way with 'em!"

"Yes, Julia's always been much too kind-hearted for other people's good!" Thus Mr. Atwater summed up—and he was this Julia's brother. Additionally, since he was the older, he had known her since her birth.

"If you ask me," said his wife, "I'll really be surprised if it all goes through without a suicide."

"Oh, not quite suicide, perhaps," Mr. Atwater protested. "I'm glad it's a dry state, though!"

She failed to fathom his simple meaning. "Why?"

"Well, some of 'em might feel that desperate at least," he explained. "Prohibition's a safeguard for the disappointed in love."

This phrase and a previous one stirred Florence, who had been sitting quietly, according to request, and "resting"; but not resting her curiosity. "Who's disappointed in love, papa?" she inquired with an explosive eagerness which slightly startled her preoccupied parents. "What is all this about Aunt Julia, and Grandpa going to live alone, and people committing suicide and prohibition and every thing? What is all this, mama?"

"Nothing, Florence."

"Nothing! That's what you always say about the very most interesting things that happen in the whole family! What is all this, papa?"

"It's nothing that would be interesting to little girls, Florence. Merely some family matters."

"My goodness!" Florence exclaimed. "I'm not a 'little girl' any more, papa! You're always forgetting my age! And if it's a family matter I belong to the family, I guess, about as much as anybody else, don't I? Grandpa himself isn't any more one of the family than I am. I don't care how old he is!"

This was undeniable, and her father laughed. "It's really nothing you'd care about one way or the other," he said.

"Well, I'd care about it if it's a secret," Florence insisted. "If it's a secret I'd want to know it whatever it's about."

"Oh, it isn't a secret, particularly, I suppose. At least, it's not to be made public for a time; it's only to be known in the family."

"Well, didn't I just prove I'm as much one of the family as—"

"Never mind," her father said soothingly. "I don't suppose there's any harm in your knowing it—if you won't go telling everybody. Your aunt Julia has just written us that she's engaged."

Mrs. Atwater uttered an exclamation, but she was too late to check him.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "I'm afraid you oughtn't to have told Florence. She isn't just the most discreet—"

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "She certainly is one of the family, however, and Julia wrote that all of the family might be told. You'll not speak of it outside the family, will you, Florence?"

But Florence was not yet able to speak of it, even inside the family—so surprising, sometimes, are parents' theories of what will not interest their children. She sat staring, her mouth open, her throat closed; and in the uncertain illumination of the room these symptoms of her emotional condition went unobserved.

"I say you won't speak of Julia's engagement outside the family, will you, Florence?"

"Papa!" she gasped. "Did Aunt Julia write she was engaged?"

"Yes."

"To get married?"

"It would seem so."

"To who?"

"To whom, Florence," her mother suggested primly.

"Mama," the daughter cried. "Who's Aunt Julia engaged to get married to? Noble Dill?"

"Good gracious, no!" Mrs. Atwater exclaimed. "What an absurd idea! It's to a young man in the place she's visiting—a stranger to all of us. Julia only met him a few weeks ago." Here she forgot Florence, and turned again to her husband, wearing her former expression of experienced foreboding.

"It's just as I said. It's exactly like Julia to do such a reckless thing!"

"But we don't know anything at all about the young man," he remonstrated.

"How do you even know he's young?" Mrs. Atwater asked crisply.

"All in the world she said about him was that he's a lawyer. He may be a widower, for all we know, or divorced, with seven or eight children."

"Oh, no, Mollie!"

"Why, he might!" she insisted. "For all we know, he may be a widower for the third or fourth time, or divorced, with any number of children. If such a person proposed to Julia, you know yourself she'd hate to be disappointing!"

Her husband laughed. "I don't think she'd go so far as to actually accept such a person and write home to announce her engagement to the family. I suppose most of her swains here have been in the habit of proposing to her just as frequently as she was unable to prevent them from going to her own room."

On the floor, near her bed, where Patty Fairchild had left her coat and hat, Florence made her second discovery. Two small, folded slips of paper lay there, dropped by Miss Fairchild when she put on her coat in the darkening room. They were the replies to Patty's whispered questions, in the game on the steps—the pledged Truth, written by Henry Rooter and Herbert Atwater on their sacred words and honors. The infatuated pair had either overestimated Patty's caution, or else each had thought she would so prize his little missive that she would treasure it in a tender safety, perhaps pinned upon her blouse (at the first opportunity) over the heart. It is positively safe to say that neither of the two varieties would ever have been set upon paper had Herbert and Henry any foreshadowing that Patty might be careless; and the partners would have been seized with the utmost horror could they have conceived the possibility of their trustful messages ever falling into the hands of the relentless creature who now, without an instant's honorable hesitation, unfolded and read them.

"Yes, if I got to tell the truth, I know I have got pretty eyes," Herbert had unfortunately written. "I am glad you think so, too, Patty, because your eyes are too. Herbert Hingsworth Atwater, Jr."

And Mr. Henry Rooter had likewise ruined himself in a coincidental manner.

"Well, Patty, my eyes are pretty, but suppose I would like to trade with yours because you have beautiful eyes, also, sure as my name is Henry Rooter."

Florence stood close to the pink-shaded electric droplight over her small white dressing table, reading again and again these pathetically honest little confidences. Her eyelids were withdrawn to an unprecedented retirement, so remarkably she stared, while her mouth seemed to prepare itself for the attempted reception of a bulk beyond its total capacity. And these plastic tokens, so immoderate as to be ordinarily the consequence of nothing short of poignant horror, were overlaid by others, subtler and more gleaming, which wrought the true significance of the contortion—a joy that was dumfounding.

Her thoughts were first of Fortune's kindness in selecting her for a favor so miraculously dovetailing into the precise need of her life, then of Henry and Herbert, each at this hour probably brushing his hair in preparation for the Sunday evening meal, and both touchingly unconscious of the calamity now befalling them; but what eventually engrossed her mind was the thought of Wallie Torbin.

Master Torbin, approaching fourteen, was in all the town the boy most dreaded by his fellow-boys, and by girls of his acquaintance, including many of both sexes who knew him only by sight—and hearing. He had no physical endowment or attainment worth mention; but boys, who could "whip him with one hand," became sycophants in his presence; the terror he inspired was moral. He had a special overdevelopment of a faculty exercised clumsily enough by most human beings, especially in their youth; in other words, he had genius—not, however, genius having to do with anything generally recognized as art or science. True, if he had been a violin prodigy or mathematical prodigy, he would have had some respect from his fellows—about equal to that he might have received if he were gifted with some pleasant deformity, such as six toes on a foot—but he would never have enjoyed such deadly prestige as had actually come to be his. In brief, then, Wallie Torbin had a genius for mockery.

"She won't do either."

"Why, how could she get out of it?"

His wife smiled pityingly. "She hasn't set a time for coming home, has she? Don't you know enough of Julia's ways to know she'll never in the world stand up to the music? She writes that all the family can be told, because she knows the news will leak out here and there, in confidence, little by little; so by the time she gets home they'll all have been through their first spasms, and after that she hopes they'll just send her some forgiving flowers and greet her with manly handclaps—and get ready to usher at the wedding!"

"Well," said Mr. Atwater, "I'm afraid you're right. It does seem rather like Julia to stay away till the first of the worst is over. I'm really sorry for some of her love-romances. I suppose it will get whispered about, and they'll hear it; and there are some of the poor things that might take it pretty hard."

"Take it pretty hard!" she echoed loudly. "There's one of 'em, at least, who will just merely lose his reason!"

"Which one?"

"Noble Dill."

At this, the slender form of Florence underwent a spasmodic seizure, in her chair, but as the fit was short, and also noiseless, it passed without being noticed.

"Yes," said Mr. Atwater, thoughtfully. "I suppose he will."

"He certainly will!" Mrs. Atwater declared. "Noble's mother told me last week that he'd gotten so he was just as liable to drop a fountain-pen in his coffee as a lump of sugar; and when any one speaks to him he either doesn't know it, or else jumps. When he says anything, himself, she says they can scarcely ever make out what he's talking about. He was trying enough before Julia went away; but since she's been gone Mrs. Dill says he's like nothing in her experience. She says he doesn't inherit it; Mr. Dill wasn't anything like this about her."

Mr. Atwater smiled faintly. "Mrs. Dill wasn't anything like Julia."

"No," said his wife. "She was quite a sensible girl. I'd hate to be in her place, now, though, when she tells Noble about this!"

"How can Mrs. Dill tell him, since she doesn't know it herself?"

"Well—perhaps she ought to know it, so that she could tell him. Somebody ought to tell him, and it ought to be done with the greatest tact. It ought to be broken to him with the most delicate care and sympathy, or the consequences—"

"Nobody could foretell the consequences," her husband interrupted—"no matter how tactfully it's broken to Noble."

"No," she said, "I suppose that's true. I think he's likely to lose his reason unless it is done very tactfully, though."

"Do you think we really ought to tell Mrs. Dill, Mollie? I mean, seriously. Do you?"

For some moments she considered his question; then answered, "No. It's possible we'd be following a Christian course in doing it; but still we're rather bound not to speak of it outside the family, and when it does get outside the family I think we'd better not be the ones responsible—especially since it might easily be traced to us. I think it's usually better to keep out of things when there's any doubt."

"Yes," he said, meditating. "I never knew any harm to come off people's sticking to their own affairs."

But as he and his wife became silent for a time, musing in the firelight, their daughter's special convictions were far from coinciding with theirs, although she, likewise, was silent—a strangeness in her which they should have observed. But so far were they from a true comprehension of her, they were unaware that she had more than a casual, young-cousinly interest in Julia Atwater's engagement and in those possible consequences to Noble Dill, which they had sketched with some intentional exaggeration, and decidedly without the staggering seriousness attributed to their predictions by their daughter. They did not even notice her expression when Mr. Atwater snapped on the light, in order to read, and she went quietly out of the library and up to her own room.

CHAMPLIN FLIES 140 MILES TO SCREEN HIS COMEDY

Sydney Champlin, who will appear at the McSwain Theatre today in "King, Queen, Joker," his first Paramount comedy production, is the first producer to utilize the "sky bus" as a means for quicker transportation to and from distant locations. The new means of transportation was given a trial during the making of this initial feature, and was so successful that doubtless it will be in great demand in the future.

Having selected a valley in the Santa Barbara Mountains, 140 miles from the Jasper Hollywood studios, as "location" for filming certain scenes, Champlin groomed several of his air mounts for the trip and accomplished his purpose without accident in less than two hours.

The sky expedition, including star, cameraman, director, support-ers and necessary equipment, left the studio at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. Two hours later the Santa Barbara location was reached and after a safe landing the company commenced work.

After the scenes were filmed the return trip was made and the party arrived in Hollywood after an absence of only eight hours. Under other circumstances, Mr. Champlin said, the trip would have necessitated several days.

Red Cross Gives $310,000 to Aid 'Clean-Up' Drive

An appropriation of $310,000 for Red Cross work in connection with the "clean-up" campaign instituted by the Government to bring the claims of all disabled service men who are entitled to Federal aid before the proper government bureau for action, has been made by the American Red Cross. The Executive Committee of the American Red Cross in making the appropriation authorized the appropriation of $35,000 of this sum to the American Legion to defray the expense of the Legion representatives assigned to the various districts of the Veterans Bureau. The remainder of the appropriation was authorized for apportionment among the several Divisions of the Red Cross for carrying on that part of the "clean-up" work that falls directly upon the Red Cross organization.

The Board of Commissioners of said City reserve the right to reject any or all bids, and bidders are cautioned to observe all the conditions set out in the specifications and bidding sheets.

Each bidder shall accompany his bid with a sworn statement in writing that the bidder has not directly or indirectly entered into any agreement, expressed or implied, with control of the price and amount of such bids or limiting the number of bidders. No bidders shall divulge sealed bids to any person whatever except those having a partnership or other financial interests with him in said bid, until after the said bids are opened. The violation of any of the foregoing provisions on the part of the bidder shall make void any contract made by him with said city based upon said bid, all as provided in Section 1, Article IX, of the Charter of City of Ada, Oklahoma.

Bids received as aforesaid will be opened and considered by the Board of Commissioners at a meeting to be held at the City Hall in the City of Ada, Oklahoma, at 2:00 P. ## IRELAND WANTS ABSURD THINGS an annual percent or tax into the Vatican at Rome. The present revolution is not going toward self government so much as it is toward government by the Pope.

"When you consider Ireland you consider a land incapable of self government. It is incapable first from a standpoint of commercial ability. Mining, agriculture, and stock raising are its principal industries. Yet all of these are on a small scale. Did you know that only a few years ago one million Irish starved when there was a potato famine in the land? The manufacturing of linen and woolen goods, raising and little agriculture, small mines and few factories. It has two ship building yards and the Irish lace industry employs three and a half or four hundred thousand women. There is nothing more as a source of employment for the masses that would give it a national idea."

The speaker then outlined the program that is demanded by the Irish Republican party, or the Sinn Fein. This will be given in full upon the publication of the speech verbatim, in sections.

Dr. Jatterson closed his speech with a stirring appeal for closer American national unity to "battle the insidious propaganda that is being circulated."

"Only One of Kind."

Holding in his hand a letter written by a Catholic at Shawnee, the state deputy of the Knights of Columbus, Dr. Patterson declared that the Catholic in Ireland had seen from the Catholic in which he said he owed no allegiance to the Pope except in ritualistic law. "Catholics recognize the authority of the Pope in religious matters and are taught from their mother's knee that love of country goes hand in hand with love of God; in civil and political matters we do not owe and do pay allegiance to the Pope or anyone other than the duly constituted authorities of our government," the statement said.

"That ought to be worth $10,000,000 in gold," Dr. Patterson said. "I can shake hands with a Catholic so far as religion is concerned, within the confines of religion, with as much good will as with a man of any other denomination. I am not speaking of the Catholics as a church but as an organization working along political lines, a system which subjects all law and allots all authority to the Pope of Rome. This tendency is written in the foundation of their history. They claim infallibility for the Pope and the bishops who work under him. And when the time comes they would make our government a satrap to the Romish brute."

Klan Is Defended.

Here Dr. Patterson stopped to make reference to the Ku Klux Klan against which, he said, the country is being filled with scathing criticism. "I read much against the so-called K. K. K. and the war

WORK ON ZR-2 WILL BE COMPLETED SOON

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Loss of the giant British built airship ZR-2 with many lives, on her trial trip in England, has not thus far caused any change in plans for the ZR-1 now building for the navy. The two designs were so dissimilar it is said by navy officials, that the wrecking of the ZR-2 carried with it no lessons so far as now known to be woven into construction of the ZR-1 as a safeguard against similar disaster to that vessel.

The ZR-1, it is explained, is the American navy's pioneer project in airship construction of the rigid type and the vessel follows very closely the design of the German Zeppelin L-49, captured intact in France during the war. Modifications to permit installation of American made propelling engines and a few other changes were necessary, but navy officials regard the ZR-1 as practically a reproduction of the L-49 which was proven by the Germans as a safe and reliable craft with all stresses, and strains demonstrated in actual flight under varying conditions.

It was the purpose of the navy experts to make the L-49, which was almost the last word in German war experience construction, the starting point for American development of lighter than air rigid war craft. On the experience gained in operation of the ZR-1 well is planned to have future improvements or increases in size.

ZR-2 Thought Complete

The ZR-2 on the other hand, represented the last word in British engineering progress over German originals and the disaster to the British built vessel, officers here feel, only tends to confirm the decision to attempt no unexplored field of construction in turning out American Zeppelins, but to proceed from one well established model to the next improvement slowly and so on step by step to whatever the ultimate lighter than air cruiser of the future is to be.

Plans for purchase of the ZR-2 in England came after the war, while designs for the ZR-1 were in hand at the Navy Department before the war ended. When hostilities ceased, the British were left with a number of giant craft under construction in addition to the R-34 which made the flight to New York and back. It was decided to stop work on these and salvage all that has been done, and the United States then stepped in to obtain by purchase the ship most advanced in construction. British R-38, was to become the ZR-2. Designation of the vessels in numerical order, in what appeared to be the reverse of the order of construction, is accounted for that fact.

WOMAN TAKES OVERDOSE OF SLEEPING POWDERS

(By the Associated Press)

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Oct. 3.—Dying from an overdose of sleeping powder and with both wrists slashed, Mrs. Paul C. Zuhlke, wife of a wealthy New York importer, who has been missing since Thursday, was found Saturday in a barn on the Zuhlke estate near Madison, it became known today. Mrs. Zuhlke died a few minutes after being found.

Declared Suicide.

When found by her husband and a party of teachers, Mrs. Zuhlke had already become unconscious. A private physician was called and later, the Madison authorities announced today, the coroner declared it to be a case of suicide.

Six months ago her only son, Paul, committed suicide in a chemical laboratory of the Morris public school by inhaling deadly fumes. Mrs. Zuhlke is said to have brooded since.

"VAMPS" WHO MADE HISTORY

By JAMES C. YOUNG.
(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
THE WOMAN WARMAKER.

IT WAS an ill-fated ship which I brought a wonderfully beautiful Italian girl to England, toward the close of the Seventeenth century. But no one who saw this ivory-skinned, dark-eyed beauty, would have thought that she was to plunge England into a period of bloodshed. So her destiny proved, for Mary of Modena was the embodiment of bad luck to England. She came over from Italy as the betrothed bride of the Duke of York. In the course of a few years he ascended the throne as James II, although at the time of his marriage no one could have foreseen that event. James was a bad king, and what is perhaps worse, he was a weak king. The people muttered against him, and his wife, Mary of Modena, urged that he flee. James hesitated, and he presently was dethroned, William of Orange taking his place. Immediately James' followers banded together in what was called the Jacobite uprisings, this being a play on the Latin name for James, which is Jacobus.

Mary, watching events from France, paid her court to Louis XIV. She is said to have caught the fancy of the gallant Louis and to have persuaded him to declare her son the true king of England, instead of William. Louis assented and a new war promptly began, much worse than the civil conflict which had preceded it in England. William succeeded in gaining allies when Louis declared his own grandson to be king of Spain. Soon the War of the Spanish Succession was in its full red tide and Europe ran with blood. The struggle lasted 14 years and before it ended practically every nation of the continent was drawn in. Armies were wiped out, furious battles won and lost. Prince Eugene, insulted by a slight of Louis, went to Austria and inflicted heavy defeats on the French, becoming the greatest military leader Austria ever had—and he was a Frenchman. Marlborough won battle after battle for England and undying fame for himself. Louis' ablest leader died and France just escaped falling into the clutches of her enemies.

Mary, the maker of wars, had well earned the name. But she still was unsatisfied, and when peace finally came she used all of her blandishments to stir up new Jacobite troubles in England. The Jacobite rebellions dragged on for a number of years. But they were hopeless, for William had firmly seated himself on the throne. Still Mary kept on with the resolution of despair and not until her death in 1718 could the English king breathe easy.

OKLAHOMA CROP IS FAIR UNDER LAST YEAR

(By the Associated Press.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 3.—Oklahoma raised slightly more than a third as much cotton this year as compared with last year's crop according to a report to the United States Bureau of Markets and Crop estimates, made here today by H. H. Schutz, federal statistician. The report stated that the condition of the growing crops continued to drop during September.

This year's crop is declared to be a likeness "that that disaster of 1918 when the yield was but 92 pounds an acre." The report states there are numerous fields in the south which will not have a sack in them, and some gins which will not face a belt.

Oklahoma cotton farmers averaged 12 or 13 bales each last year, the report states, while the outlook for this season is three bales and in some counties will hardly average a bale to three farmers.

Insects Conspire

The army worm, the weevil and the weather all joined forces against the growing crop, it is explained, with the weevil the strongest aggressor. In some counties two thirds of the bolls were injured, the weevil taking nearly all the bolls except a few earlier ones, while few blooms have matured since the middle of August. The report declares that in many fields the worms stripped the plant clean of leaves.

There is no top crop in Oklahoma this season, and but little or no middle crops, the report points out. One picking is expected to take all of the cotton in some sections, while in others the first time over will take from 60 to 80 percent of the crop. Indications point to more than 36 percent of the crop now in the bale, the report states.

SOME FACTS ABOUT ICE

ICE IS THE CHEAPEST COMMODITY SOLD TO THE PUBLIC IN PROPORTION TO THE COST OF PRODUCTION:

It is a refrigerant, not a food, but a preservative of food and health.

It is a home product, manufactured and sold by home people—delivered direct from the factory to the consumer without any added cost for freight, middle-men's profit, or extra handling.

Its production requires a large investment in especially constructed buildings, and a class of equipment that is short lived, and requires constant outlays for upkeep, and renewals; and the service also requires a large investment in delivery equipment, consisting of teams, wagons, trucks, barns, etc., and this equipment operates about one-third of each year.

Because of its seasonable character, the plant organization, as well as the delivery organization, is maintained approximately eight months in each year at a loss, and begins each season's business with a heavy deficit.

This commodity is manufactured and turned over to the delivery organization, which distributes it in small quantities into thousands of homes, and places of business, throughout the city, at a cost to the consumer of a fraction of one cent per pound, which is much less than the margin between the wholesale cost and retail price of food commodities.

ICE IS THE CHEAPEST COMMODITY YOU BUY, AND IS A HOME PRODUCT.
